Agnes's Sanitarium, Baltimore, After the mass an address was delivered to the young men by the Reverend Father James

Much grief is felt among the young Catholes of the city over the condition of the beloved Architishop, who was always a friend and helper of the Knights of Father Mathew Society. The latest information which has been received from Baltimore is that the stricken prelate is rapidly failing in both mind and body, and that his patient physicians have little or no hope of his recevery POWER OF YOUNG ORGANIZATION.

In his address to the young men, Father Coffey called attention to the power that an organization of the kind, with its 4,000 members in the State, might exert in poll-members in the State, might exert in polities if it took a stand for the right against all manner of evil.

The Knights of Father Mathew can have nothing in common with the liquor clement. They must meet that, just as they meet any other evil, with a bold front. The young man in the future who aspires to political honors will find that he must associate, not with the divekeeper and liquor seller, but with the good people who are a majority in the community.

Home virtues are not the highest object that is to be attained. We should not early be good curselves, but we should not early be good curselves, but we should stand for all that is good and against all that is bad. If we wish to succeed, we cannot compromise with sin for the sake of gaining the help of any man. The saleon man's power in politics must be cut off, and it will be if the young men of the community case to exter to him for the sake of holding office.

Father Coffey said that the Knights of Fathew Mathew had exercised a great influence for good in St. Louis, and that he hoped that they would continue to fight with him on the "danger line." He praised the work of Sir Knight Commander O'Brien for the efforts he had put forth to spread the cause of total abstrance.

After the address, the knights were served with lunch in the rooms adjoining the church, by Kenrick Council and the ladies of St. John's Parish. Father Coffey was assisted in the service by Father Stolte.

Father Algue will also have charge of the ethnological, geological, botanical and zoological exhibit. He will show a set of scientific charts which will be used in the future by the United States Geodetic and Coes: Survey.

They will deal with the climatology, seimology and terrestrial magnetism of the Pallippines. These charts and collections represent half a century's work of Jesuit scholars and missionaries in the islands. Father Algue was the founder of the original Manila observatory under the Spanish regime and one of the first acts of Congress after the United States acquired possession of the Philippines was to authorize him to establish a Government observatory at Manila.

He was here two years ago, having come to Washington to superintend the publication of two large volumes descriptive of the Philippines, which were printed at Government expense and are now the standard reference books of that character.

UNION ELECTS OFFICERS.

Mr. Rinkel declares that no human ever showed greater grief over the loss of a About the time the lives of the pups were anuffed out there was torn in the Rinkel barn five little kittens. One of these died, but the four others thrived. One morning the mother cat disappeared. No one knew where she had gone and after two days of continued absence the predica-ment of the kittens grew alarming. They were without the care of a mother and were without nourishment.

The sorrow-stricken fox terrier saw the "orphan" kittens and a bond of friendship sprang up between them. It grew exceedngly strong, to the surprise of Mr. Rinkel, for when he opened the barn door one morning, he saw the little kittens nestled close to the fox terrier, and no kitten ever acted more "at home."

Since then the affection between the dog and the kittens has grown stronger and the kittens seem happy. They are getting their nourishment regularly and the fox terrifer is protecting them just as if they were her own.
